

The Ethics & Proper Context for Information Received Via Intuitive Consultations

by Penney Peirce

Penney Peirce's Intuitive Consulting sessions are meant to assist you in making a reliable connection to your own inner wisdom and in developing your own intuitive capacity. Sessions can provide meaningful insights into your talents, paths of self-expression, process of personal development, and ways of achieving greater success and contentment in life. Any information shared during these sessions is to aid you in better understanding how spiritual, emotional, and psychological factors may influence your behavior and the choices you make, so you can become a more loving, balanced, whole, and happy person.

It should be remembered that the perceptions shared are filtered through another human being's reality constructs, and are always to be considered and made sense of in light of your own worldview. Even the most accurate, wisest, emotionally mature counselor may give you insights that are not appropriate, and only you can determine that.

In addition, since we are all evolving continually, a session is like a snapshot of today's most probable optimal reality. You will weave in many more factors and choices as you go along, so that the next snapshot of your reality may look somewhat different. In many cases, you'll find that the information shared will make sense several months (or even several years) later. You may stall a process of change, sometimes from fear and sometimes for very good reasons.

Where appropriate, Penney may recommend other practitioners or professionals who can supply information she does not specialize in. Penney does not diagnose or prescribe for disease or psychiatric conditions. An Intuitive Consultation should not be a substitute for medical or psychiatric care, but can work in concert with a medical diagnosis to help heal underlying factors influencing health.

Nothing said, printed, or produced by Penney Peirce is intended to take the place of other life advisors (medical, psychological, religious, financial, legal, etc.), but should be used in conjunction with a well-rounded program of self care. Should you decide to use any ideas, tools, procedures, exercises, or other suggestions made by Penney, you do so at your own discretion, and where necessary, under the supervision of competent professionals.
